AS THOUSANDS OF protesters burned her in effigy, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday spurned calls for the scrapping of the hugely unpopular value-added tax (VAT) on oil, declaring there was no turning back on fiscal reforms that she said were bringing in billions of pesos in revenues.

To abolish the 12-percent VAT would be to endanger the country's economic future, Ms. Arroyo said in her eighth State of the Nation Address (Sona) before Congress.

In a Spanish-inflected Manila Clara gown, Ms. Arroyo said the revenues from VAT would help the Philippines weather what she described as a "historic moment" of global economic uncertainty.

"The gods are not to bleed in the face of rough choices, I thank God," she told the joint chambers of Congress. "But the wisdom to recognize how needed you are, I thank you, Congress, for hearing the bill, I thank the taxpayers."

PEPPERS WILL JUST HAVE TO GRIN and bear it, or so it will bear it.

That's essentially how administration supporters, opposition figures and business leaders reacted to President Macapagal-Arroyo's decision, announced in her State of the Nation Address (Sona), to keep the expanded value-added tax (VAT) in the face of skyrocketing oil and food prices.

"We must be part of the solution. Each Filipino has a responsibility to his family, his community and his country. We must not rely on the government alone. We must all work together," Vice President Noli de Castro said.

Makei Mayor Agonista Binay, president of the United Opposition, delivered his version of the state of the nation by citing government figures: Almost 3 million Filipinos are unemployed, 7 million are underemployed, inflation is a record in 14 years at 3.4 percent.

"This is the true state of the nation in the year 2008. Let us hope this ends in 2010, or earlier, so the prolonged suffering of the nation will be ended, and the people will wake up to a new morning," Binay said.

Businessmen, however, heaved a sigh of relief.

SWIMMING NOTICE TO SWIMMERS: ahead of plenary debates over the controversial reproductive health bill, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday reaffirmed her support for natural family planning over artificial methods such as condoms and pills.

'Something fishy' in Meralco ruling

Switching of GSIS case between CA divisions draws ire of another justice

By Lela B. Solares

JUSTICE JOSE SARMO CAME OUT PUBLICLY YESTERDAY to say something "freaky" in the recent court ruling that junked a Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) order halting the board elections of Manila Electric Co. (Meralco).

Indeed, who could the typical 9th Division of the Court of Appeals, said he had been hearing the case filed by the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) against Meralco's controlling Lopez family when he was suddenly and unexpectedly transferred to the 12th Division. "Something 'quite disturbing' and 'freaky' happened when another division suddenly released a decision on the case," he said yesterday.

"The ruling states, 'and the justice, adding that he was called for an investigation of the switching of the Meralco case to 'preserve the court's integrity'."

Sarmiento is the second justice to come out to question the Manila-Vito decision issued by the 12th Division on July 21.

Justice Reyes (Manila-Vito) said, who said to Sarmiento's division, had earlier written

Chief of Appeals Presiding Justice Conde to request to say it was "based on his personal conviction" that the board election decision had ruled on the case with no interfering factor of the transfer.

It was the 12th Division of the appellate court headed by Justice Sarmiento that later issued the controversial decision on July 21 rejecting the SEC order stopping the power utility's board members from July 27 board election. The Lopez family controls Meralco.

Trojan with Reyes in the 12th Division were Justice Virginia Reyes (the former) and Justice Sarmiento. A

When asked what he thought the reason for the case-switching was, Sarmiento said, "The reason is some case to the investigation."

And when asked if the Manila-Vito case was what he was referring to when he revealed during a recent talk at the University of the Philippines that he had rejected money offered in relation to a case, he replied, "This case is not an option, and I will not go to it."

He also said he was unaware of the justice of Reyes and Reyes for apparently grabbing the case.

"This justice is in good as mine, but for it is so that I just don't want the house of this court to be undermined and I don't want the integrity of this court to be compromised," he said.

Wagon had called for a case to have status of the 66 from 641 appellate court justices, including those based in Cebu and Cagayan de Oro cities, on July 11 to discuss the issue.

Sarmiento said the non-unionization of Meralco and the GSIS-appointing their appointees were covered by the 12th Division on July 11, but Justice Vito was already being asked to approve a decision on July 11.

Reyes was also the designated justice of Sarmiento's 12th Division.

"Now you prepare a case that 30-page decision without having said the non-unionization?" It was in one of an of, you know, I want to know it, but it is a case for the parties to the case-unionization when it was going to be said- because the decision was already made. This was the case that made me feel surprised that the decision was "said."

Sarmiento also said he found "mystic" and "mystical" Meralco's July 7 motion saying Reyes to assume the chairmanship of the division. He said the proper pleading was a motion to inhibit, and added that his participation in the case was never questioned during oral arguments.

"I told Justice Reyes that under the circumstances, if he would take on assuming the chairmanship, then something was wrong," he said.

He also noted that a decision on the Manila-Vito case was filed again on July 11 was withdrawn on the ground that it was pending certain papers.

The two parties of the 12th Division then learned that Justice Vito might be the one to hear the case. Justice Reyes said at Sarmiento and Reyes' appearance during the clarification they had sought from Sarmiento's report.

ing, which division had jurisdiction over the Manila-Vito case.

The 12th Division's Meralco ruling, he noted, was issued on July 23, the day before Sarmiento issued his opinion saying that the division headed by Sarmiento should decide the case.

According to the controversy in the Court of Appeals, Sarmiento for Sarmiento ordered the division headed down by the 12th Division to hear the case.

In a press statement, lawyer Natividad Torking of the Villanueva Cruz Marro and Sarmiento law office pointed out to Sarmiento that the appellate court should state that "once a case is assigned to a justice for study or report (as he proceeds), [he] cannot the case even if he is transferred to another division."

Torking pointed out that Reyes, who was the assigned justice in the case, was a justice, was transferred to another division, the 12th, and he simply said that case along with him.

Meralco's lawyer said it was their understanding that Sarmiento was only presiding over the hearings because Reyes was no longer

RP backs end to traffic in small arms

THE PHILIPPINES IS SUPPORTING efforts to end the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons by strengthening implementation of a global instrument on marking and tracking these weapons.

In a report to the Department of Foreign Affairs, Permanent Representative to the UN in New York, Heleno Davila Jr., said the country was one of the 134 that voted in favor of the "Convention of the Third Biennial Meeting of States Parties to the Convention."

He said the instrument, known as the "Convention of the Third Biennial Meeting of States Parties to the Convention," was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in December 2005, committed states to mark, trace and destroy weapons made in order to reduce the damage of their ending up in the illicit market and war zones.

The report also spelled out the "New Biennial Meeting of States Parties to the Convention of the Third Biennial Meeting of States Parties to the Convention," which is a global framework for making the illicit trade in small arms, light arms and light weapons.

Fragments point to oxygen tank blast on Qantas jet

INVESTIGATORS based fragments that appeared to belong to the theory that an oxygen tank exploded on a Qantas jet, leading it to make an emergency landing in Perth with a reported hole in its fuselage, an Australian investigation and possibly.

Boeing 747, a jet investigator in the Australian Transport Safety Bureau, said a rules and other small fragments would be used to determine if they came from the tank, which was supposed to provide oxygen to passengers during an emergency.

He said the fragments were found in the passenger cabin close to where the missing cabin crew member was found, along with the wreckage of the aircraft.

The Boeing 747-400 had to make an emergency landing after a cabin depressurization, 3,000 feet (900 meters) on Friday the one among the 300 passengers and crew who reported hearing a loud bang before the plane suddenly depressurized, was reported.

"We recovered a lot of debris from the oxygen tanks," Rob said a news conference. "It is a Boeing 747-400 that was in the air when the accident occurred."

If the rules and other fragments are determined to have come from the oxygen tank, further investigation would be required to determine why the tank blew, he said.

The aircraft flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder arrived yesterday in Australia, where officials said it would take them several days to download the information they contain.

Boeing and other Australian safety officials said they were unaware of any previous cases in which an oxygen tank caused an in-flight accident.

Qantas has ordered all oxygen tanks in its fleet of 747-400s to be regularly inspected.

Some passengers said Australian media that their oxygen masks failed to work properly during the crisis, leading some to suffocate.

The US Federal Aviation Administration said earlier it was unable to inspect the oxygen cylinders on the plane.

David Cox, Qantas head of engineering, said engineers yesterday the FAA directive applied to a different type of oxygen system than the one being installed in the Qantas emergency.

Three of Qantas aircraft were affected by the FAA directive and all were inspected by January 2007, Cox said.

The aircraft chief executive, Geoff Dixon, said that when the crash occurred the "very last accident" was likely beyond the aircraft's control.

"We don't know and we can't speculate on what happened in the aircraft," Dixon said a news conference.

"Obviously there is every chance it is something to do with the aircraft, and it is something that may have well been out of our control. We're looking at it now."

The FAA directive followed a report that outside oxygen cylinder support brackets on Boeing 777-300ERs may not have been properly installed, which the FAA said could cause oxygen tanks to fall out.

The plane, on route from London to Melbourne, stopped over in Hong Kong on Tuesday before making the emergency landing at the Perth airport.

Qantas said the aircraft was not damaged and the flight resumed on Wednesday.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PHILIPPINE CONGRESS

We, the undersigned concerned NGOs/POs/stakeholders/residents and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao, bound by a common goal to preserve the blessings of democracy, hereby manifest and register our strong opposition to any move that would pave the way for the resetting of the ARMM polls which are scheduled on August 11, 2008, for the following reasons, to wit:

- a. Both the expiration of the terms of office of the officials elected during the 2005 ARMM elections and the beginning of the terms of office of those that will be elected to office this August 11, 2008 elections are fixed, in its legal contemplation by Section 7 of Article VII of R.A. 9054, the Organic Act for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao to be on September 30, 2008.

Any act therefore that would alter or change this date (September 30) is, in effect an amendment to the law (R.A. 9054), and any amendment to it, pursuant to section 3 of Article XVII thereof must, in order for it to have a legal effect be submitted for approval to the people of the region in a plebiscite called for the purpose, which shall be held not earlier than sixty (60) days nor later than ninety (90) days after its approval;

Thus, considering that we have barely few days before the scheduled election, we submit that amendment of the said law at this point, is not legally sensible and technically feasible;

- b. The holding of elections as scheduled will not, in any way disrupt the on-going peace talks between the GRP and the MILF, as election is not an instrument of war that breaches the atmosphere of peace but a healthy indication that democracy reigns in our Region;
- c. Substantial public funds are already expended for the purpose of the elections and it would be a senseless spending for the government, in the face of economic turmoil being experienced by our country, to appropriate funds again for the same purpose.
- d. The constituents of the Autonomous Region will be deprived of their rights to be involved and consulted should there be an immediate change/amendment of any provision of existing organic act/law without following the legal principle of due process.

2 bomb attacks in Istanbul square kill 17

ISTANBUL, TURKEY—TURKISH POLICE DETAINED three teenagers in connection with two bomb blasts in a packed Istanbul square, a newspaper reported on Monday. The blasts killed 17 people and injured more than 150 in the deadliest attack here in almost five years.

The Milliyet newspaper reported on its website that three teens, aged 16 and 17, were found late on Sunday in the basement of an apartment close to the explosion site following a tip from residents.

The paper reported the three claimed they fell in the blast because they were frightened from the explosions.

The city's governor called it a "terror attack" but officials did not blame any specific group and were immediately criticized for responsibility. "Oblivious, education, citizenship, justice, and police support Istanbul really may be behind it because Turkish police have planned a bombing campaign in Turkish cities."

"There is no doubt that this is a terror attack," the Istanbul's Chief prosecutor said.

The first bomb went off in the residential neighborhood of Uzunyurt in a busy square closed to traffic where people congregated at night, witnesses said. A number of people walked over to help the victims when a second, more powerful blast hit them by about 10 minutes after the first.

Many of the casualties were from the second explosion, witnesses said.

"The fact that there was a second in the area has increased the number of casualties," the governor said. The governor's office said 154 people were injured, 130 close, 13 were in critical condition, a government official at the scene said.

Joe Rosenthal, Press reporter who arrived shortly after the explosions saw at least 12 people lying on the ground. Blood, glass, clothing, shoes, newspapers and other debris, including a car, were scattered around the square to where crowds were surging to see the scene.

Many of the injured walked for medical treatment, while some were covered with blood. Several people who appeared seriously wounded were wrapped in blankets and carried away from the scene, witnesses said.

"The first explosion was in a shopping block," said Huseyin Kocak, who owns a nearby shop. "The second explosion was in a busy square."

"The first explosion was very strong," Kocak added. "Several people came to see what was going on. There were the second explosion occurred and a injured many witnesses." AP

Olympics, Asiad major SBP goals

By John Llanes, Contributor

CORR CITY—A STEADY STATE 2010 World Championships, the Asian Games and a return to the Olympics in 2012 by way of bagging the 2011 FIBA Asia Cup.

These are the long-term goals set by the basketball federation in the Philippines, its after its two-day strategic planning conference at the Manila Polo Hotel's premises.

During the conference attended by 18 members of the 20-year-old of the SBP, led by Vice Chair Marcos and Marcos's flagship, chair and president of SBP the national league last night approved the implementation of plans aimed to boost local basketball.

Basketball players and Colic Rep. Eduardo Galan also attended the session.

SBP executive director Bob Llanes said the mission set by the board is "ambitious but achievable if we can begin implementing every program as soon as possible."

Llanes presented to the SBP board a comprehensive business plan for various age groups, national championships and reaching a four-year development plan for the national team and the creation of a "Filipino philosophy" for basketball.

"The planning session opened the board's eyes to the reality that the SBP is not a mere sport organization or a source of income," said vice chair Fides Vergas. "It is focused on developing basketball Philippines and be proud of, with a mission to qualify for the 2012 London Olympics, winning the Asian Games gold medal and developing a grassroots program."

The grassroots programs include the establishment of a national intermediate women's event, a women's national league and a national men's championship, which is already a fully-organized event.

League basketball official Marcos "Mang" Manalang will lead a regulatory and standards committee that will study, create and implement a unified and common philosophy for officiating, coaching and playing.

Farmers seek indemnity fund for stricken hogs

LOCAL NEWS PARADOX: Asking the government to pick up an "endowment fund" to financially assist those in the event of an "earthquake."

The National Petroleum Industry Association (NPIA) has come up with this proposal, along with several other recommendations, to help improve the nation's refining during the recently held 17th Tripartite Refining Conference.

The funds are necessary not only to identify the diseases that led the local swine farms to shut last year, but to also invest in a research fund in the event of another disease outbreak, the ISAFB said in a briefing.

“We need long-term solutions to address, not just stop, drug production,” says the Philippine Drug Crime Task Force’s chair. "The past decade of the C&A implementation has failed to improve agricultural productivity and has instead produced broad-based worsening in livelihoods, by requiring more government support," the group claimed. "It is clear that government resources instead be directed toward improving food production by increasing support to corporate agriculture and other productive enterprises."

Gov't spent P351.72B to settle first half debt

By Michelle V. Riano

Debt servicing still came ahead of social services spending

SIXTY-TWO COUNTRIES have spent more than 10 percent of their gross domestic product (GDP) on interest payments to foreign lenders, according to the World Bank.

The Philippines is among the countries that spent more than 10 percent of its GDP on interest payments to foreign lenders, according to the World Bank.

For June alone, debt service amounted to P30.75 billion.

Now, the government is expected to spend more on borrowing because the funds that remained, after settling part of its obligations, were not enough for it to meet its other expenditure requirements, such as infrastructure and social services, as well as salaries of state workers.

Finance officials admitted that, based on the latest figures, debt service was still rising a large portion of its revenue.

But they said the figures also showed that interest payments from the current year on debt service in previous years.

Spending for debt service in the first half of the year was 3.3 percent higher than the P33.32 billion spent in the same period a year ago.

The latest share of debt service to revenue also fell from the 48 percent registered in the first half last year, and from the over 50 percent in the early 2000s.

Of the amount spent in the first half to pay debts, P14.97 billion accounted for interest, while the bigger share of P19.73 billion was used to settle principal obligations.

This year, the government borrowed P14.24 billion from domestic lenders, and P13.48 billion from foreign lenders.

Although the government is increasingly coming under pressure to spend more on social services, due to the rise in poverty incidence, it continues to reprimand pay its debts, estimated at around P4.8 billion, as they fall due.

Finance officials had said that because the government continued to honor its debt obligations, domestic and international lenders had kept their doors open to the country every time it needed to borrow.

The government had relied heavily on borrowing over the years because its collection would usually prove insufficient to meet its expenditure requirements.

But according to the Department of Finance, the government has been working on its debt to budget deficit, hoping to attain a balanced budget by 2010.

Finance officials said that with a balanced budget, the government would be free to reduce its borrowing. This is because the government will only have to borrow to pay its maturing obligations, as it will not have to borrow to meet its needs for public programs, projects and operations.

The government also hoped to reduce the budget deficit this year due to the downturn in the global economy and high inflation, it was forced to spend more on social services than originally projected.

The government decided to allow itself to incur a maximum budget deficit of P75 billion this year, and to incur a new deficit goal in 2008.

Double-digit remittance growth trend seen to go on

Don C. Davila

REMITTANCES FROM OVERSEAS WORKERS may continue the double-digit growth trend in the next few years, according to the latest survey of remittance growth.

"We can reasonably expect remittances to continue growing robustly in the future," GlobalVest said in its latest monthly report. "Our forecast for the next year is a 10 percent, or more, increase in remittance growth, based on recent trends. The rate is unlikely to fall below the 12.5 percent growth registered in 2007, and may reach growth rates of 14 percent in 2008."

The report, written by Filipinologist Ramon Bernabe and Philippine Overseas Remittance Services, said that even though the world's economy is slowing, remittance growth is expected to continue. This, in turn, would help the country's foreign exchange earnings, which is an important source of foreign funds and a major source of foreign exchange earnings.

For now, the report said that a geographically diverse pool of remittance workers is helping to sustain growth in remittance flows, which, in turn, would help the country's foreign exchange earnings.

For now, the report said that a geographically diverse pool of remittance workers is helping to sustain growth in remittance flows, which, in turn, would help the country's foreign exchange earnings.

While the US economy had slowed down, the increase in the rate of double-digit growth in remittance flows was growing rapidly as a result of high oil prices. The increase in oil prices was also a result of the increase in oil prices.

"The US economy had slowed down, the increase in the rate of double-digit growth in remittance flows was growing rapidly as a result of high oil prices. The increase in oil prices was also a result of the increase in oil prices."

"The number of Filipinos working in the US was growing rapidly. The number of Filipinos working in the US was growing rapidly."

With a steady growth rate in remittances, we are quite optimistic about the balance of payments (BOP) can still pay for imports and services, and that the BOP will remain in surplus.

Each month, GlobalVest released a new remittance survey. The survey showed that remittance growth was strong in 2007, and that the trend was expected to continue in 2008.
